AIR DEFENCE

Proliferation game: trading air defence systems and cruise missiles/ Sean O'Connor

Jane's Intelligence Review: Vol 25, Issue 12, December 2013, pp.48-53 (123)

The increased proliferation of cruise and air defence missile systems is providing smaller states with advanced military capabilities. This article outlines the key proliferators and the impact this trade is having on strategic thinking.

AIR POWER

Rotary wing options for dedicated special operations missions / Suresh Abraham.

Asian Defence Journal : November 2013, pp. 22-26 (131)

Short review of helicopters which have features that may be of interest or relevant to special operations.

Starting gun: firing up the precision engagement debate/ Richard Scott, Dr. Lee Willett

Jane's Navy International: Vol 118, Issue 10, December 2013, pp.10-11 (124)

This article takes a look at what could the new generation of extended range, precision-guided munitions offer to maritime fires.

ARMED CONFLICT

No end in sight to Syria's war/ Nicholas Blanford

Jane's Islamic Affairs Analyst: December 2013, pp.8-10 (121)

Syrian president Bashar al-Assad seems to be gaining the upper hand in the two-and-a-half year civil war. This article examines the future of the conflict in Syria and its spillover into Lebanon.

ARMS CONTROL

UN's Arms Trade Treaty : the beginnings of a regulated arms market? / Adlinna Abdul Alim.

Asian Defence Journal : November 2013, pp. 4-6, 8 (131)

Discusses the potential of the United Nations Arms Trade Treaty to regulate the global arms trade now that the United States has signed it (previous US administrations had rejected it). The article reports that 113 states have signed the treaty but only seven have ratified it - fifty must do so before it enters into full force.

ASIA PACIFIC

Asian Defence Yearbook 2013

Asian Defence Yearbook : 2013, pp. 1-96 (131)

Produced by the publishers of Asian Defence Journal this is an annual review of defence and security matters in the Asia Pacific region. Arranged in three sections. Section One: strategic and regional affairs with procurement and technology; Section Two: Country and armed forces profiles; Section Three: Asia Pacific military balance 2012-2013. This edition includes an article on the Lahad Datu incident of February 2013 which highlighted the on-going territorial tensions between the Philippines and Malaysia about Sabah.

ASIAN

China and Japan in "ASEAN Plus" multilateral arrangements : raining on the other guy's parade/ Chien Peng Chung

Asian Survey : Vol.53, No.5, September/October 2013, pp.801-824 (12)

The economic groupings ASEAN plus Three and East Asia Summit, and the security groupings ASEAN Regional Forum and Defense Ministerial Meeting have moved from attempts at cooperation to competition for influence.

Launching a new generation: tracing Asian grenade developments/ Anthony G. Williams

RUSI Newsbrief: Vol 33 No 6, November 2013, pp.34-35 (129)

Eastern grenade launcher and ammunition developments are moving at a faster-than-ever pace. China, Singapore and South Korea now produce powerful alternative systems.

AUSTRALIA

New Australian government faces security issues.

Defense & Foreign Affairs Strategic Policy : Vol XXXI No 9, 2013, pp. 24. (22)

Brief report on the security position facing Australia's new government under Prime Minister Tony Abbott. Includes main appointments such as Defence Minister and expected changes in civil service senior positions. Written before the spying furore with Indonesia.

Australian defence: the future under Abbott/
Mark Thomson

RUSI Newsbrief: Vol 33 No 6, November 2013, pp.15-17 (129)

As Australia's new prime minister, Tony Abbott's ability to deliver on two key campaign promises in the face of ongoing fiscal difficulties will shape the country's defence posture and capabilities for years to come.

In for the long haul: Australia looks to bridge the submarine gap/ Julian Kerr

Jane's Navy International: Vol 118, Issue 10,
December 2013, pp.18-25 (124)

New maintenance practice, improved stakeholder relationships and an extensive obsolescence mitigation programme are central to improving the operational sustainability of the Royal Australian Navy's Collins-class submarines. Meanwhile, policymakers are becoming increasingly aware of the likely need for a service life extension programme for the in-service submarines.

CHEM-BIO WEAPONSDissuading biological weapons proliferation /
Sonia Ben Ouagrham-Gormley.

Contemporary Security Policy : Vol 34 No 3,
December 2013, pp. 473-500 (104)

After the 2001 terrorist attacks programmes were developed to improve defences against biological weapons and also to dissuade state and non-state actors from developing such weapons. This paper argues that current programmes are counterproductive because they emphasise the threat posed by biological weapons thus making them more rather than less attractive to potential users. Suggests practical steps that should be taken to correct the present situation.

Regime security : a new theory for understanding the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons / Gregory D Koblenz.

Contemporary Security Policy : Vol 34 No 3,
December 2013, pp. 501-525 (104)

Puts the case for better understanding of the influence regime security has on the possibility that governments which lack political legitimacy may develop chemical and biological weapons. Notes that for non-legitimate leaders regime survival often equates to personal physical survival and internal threats are generally considered more dangerous than external ones. The article refers to Syria and South Africa as examples of chem-bio weapons developers.

The origins of chemical warfare in the French Army / Jonathan Krause.

War in History : Vol 20 No 4, 2013, pp.545-556 (53)

Germany was first to use poison gas during the First World War (chlorine gas at Second Ypres, 1915). This article shows that in response and despite not having any significant chemical industry France tried hard to develop protective measures for its troops and to develop offensive weapons. The latter included the first asphyxiating gas shells to be fired from field guns. These were used effectively to neutralise German batteries.

CHINADialogues and their implications in Sino-
American relations / Robert G Sutter.

Issues & Studies : Vol 49 No 3, September 2013, pp.
2-34 (34)

Review of the role of exchanges and dialogues between the USA and China since 1972 (the year of President Nixon's first visit). Finds that such dialogues are considered important by both parties but that the reality of military exchanges shows their limitations. Dialogues are enablers of improved relations but it is policy makers in both countries who drive or constrain such developments.

Aiming high: China's air ambitions/ Craig
Caffrey

Jane's Defence Weekly: Vol 50 Issue 49, 04
December 2013, pp.22-26 (122)

While gaps still remain in key areas, China's overall development and production of military aircraft is advancing rapidly.

Enter the dragon: China's naval export drive picks up speed/ Alex Pape and Richard Scott

Jane's Navy International: Vol 118, Issue 10,
December 2013, pp.26-30 (124)

Already well placed in traditional markets in Asia and Africa, China's warship builders are striving to access new frontiers.

Strait talking: China's military power grows in the Taiwan Strait/ J Michael Cole

Jane's Intelligence Review: Vol 25, Issue 12,
November 2013, pp.28-33 (123)

China is continuing to build up its military strength while increasing ties with Taiwan, as Beijing maintains its claims on the island. This article examines how the shifting balance of forces raises the threat of blockade and armed conflict facing Taiwan.

CYBER

Zeros and ones: tackling cyber attack at the critical edge/ Anika Torruella

IHS Jane's International Defence Review : Vol 46, December 2013, pp.60-65 (120)

The rise of network-enabled capabilities offers ever-swifter decision-making and action, but also raises the spectre of vulnerability through reliance. This article investigates how they threaten strategic and tactical measures.

CYBER SECURITY

Faceless crime: criminal groups turn to cyber technology/ Robert Pritchard

Jane's Intelligence Review: Vol 25, Issue 12, December 2013, pp.44-47 (123)

As awareness of the need for online privacy grows, technology is increasingly becoming available to help internet users maintain anonymity. This article investigates illegal activities facilitated by such technology and the inherent problems in tackling it.

CYBER WARFARE

The meaning of the cyber revolution: perils to theory and statecraft/ Lucas Kello

International Security: Vol 38 No 2, Fall 2013, pp.7-40 (68)

This article argues that integrating cyber realities into the international security studies agenda is necessary to develop effective policies and to enhance the field's intellectual progress. Furthermore, since cyberweapons are not overtly violent, their use is unlikely to fit the traditional criterion of interstate war, rather the new capability is expanding the range of possible harm and outcomes between the concepts of war and peace with important consequences for national and international security.

DISASTERS

Decision-making behaviour during urban search and rescue : a case study of Germany / Quirin Hamp, Leonhard Reindl, and Denise Guthlin.

Disasters : Vol 38 No 1, January 2014, pp.84-107 (23)

Rescuers responding to urban search and rescue missions have to deal with uncertain or unreliable information and also with conflicting objectives such as speed of response and safety of rescue personnel. This study looks at how rescuers cope with these demands and whether GIS based solutions might help.

ELECTRONIC WARFARE

Naval ESM keeps up with radars / Richard Scott and Luca Peruzzi.

Journal of Electronic Defense : Vol 36 No 11, November 2013, pp.24-30 (70)

Review of recent developments, particularly from Europe, of shipboard ESM systems.

Technology survey : a sampling of COMINT/DF receivers / Ollie Holt.

Journal of Electronic Defense : Vol 36 No 11, November 2013, pp.31-42 (70)

Survey of communication intelligence and direction finding receivers. Starts with a brief review of what these systems do, then in table form presents details of 74 products from 31 manufacturers around the world.

EW101 : digital radio frequency memories - DRFMs part 2 / Dave Adamy.

Journal of Electronic Defense : Vol 36 No 11, November 2013, pp.44-46 (70)

Discusses role of DRFMs in signal jamming.

EUROPE

The material roots of European strategy : beyond culture and values / Tom Dyson.

Contemporary Security Policy : Vol 34 No 3, December 2013, pp. 419-445 (104)

Europe's Common Security and Defence Policy is intended to provide a unified defence capability, an aim made more pressing by budget constraints and America's pivot towards Asia. This article considers factors influencing the development of the CSDP particularly those affecting the major European defence partners Britain, France and Germany.

The European neutrals and NATO : ambiguous partnership / Andrew Cottey.

Contemporary Security Policy : Vol 34 No 3, December 2013, pp. 446-472 (104)

Study of the factors influencing the current extent and possible development of relations between the neutral states of Europe (Austria, Finland, Ireland, Sweden and Switzerland) and NATO.

FLYING

As bees see it, landings are easy / Dan Thisdell.

Flight International : Vol 184 No 5417, 26 November - 2 December 2013, p.45 (65)

Reports an article titled "A universal strategy for visually guided landing" which was published in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, 4 November 2013. The article identifies how bees manage to land safely yet have only limited nervous system capacity and little if any stereo vision. The findings could have profound implications for UAVs.

INDIA

Signs of change in India's defence industrial base/ Ajai Shukla

RUSI Newsbrief: Vol 33 No 6, November 2013, pp.17-19 (129)

The current restructuring of India's defence industrial base is aimed at improving the quality of indigenous platforms through greater accountability, increasing defence exports and reducing the cost of procurement to India's armed forces.

INDONESIA

Indonesia as a (possible) leader in the new regional architecture: future or illusion? / Lina A Alexandra.

The Indonesian Quarterly : Vol 41 No 3, 2013, pp. 88-109 (30)

Considers whether Indonesia has the capability to take a lead role in Southeast Asia. Notes that the country's size, population, natural resources and economic growth make such a role a possibility, however Indonesia has not yet demonstrated its political leadership capacity at the regional and international levels.

Indonesia and the concept of regional power / Shafiah F Muhibat.

The Indonesian Quarterly : Vol 41 No 3, 2013, pp. 109-122 (30)

Considers whether Indonesia can be considered a regional power and the extent to which this may be constrained by internal challenges such as infrastructure, public health, and employment.

Contemporary Security Policy : Vol 34 No 3, December 2013, pp. 526-551 (104)

This article identifies limitations in NATO's clear-hold-build operational approach to counterinsurgency. Suggests the reality is much more complex than the neat linear progression implied, and notes the danger of mistaking clear-hold-build for a strategy. Proposes five principles to guide its future application.

INTELLIGENCE OPERATIONSThe mutiny that never was : the Special Operations Executive and the failure of Operation 'Kitchenmaid' / James Crossland.

Intelligence and National Security : Vol 28 No 6, December 2013, pp.808-823 (99)

In Greece in 1944 two thousand German troops proposed to desert the Wehrmacht and join SOE and Greek partisans. This article describes who the German troops were, looks at relations between SOE Cairo and the Foreign Office in London, considers SOE's response to the proposal, how the proposal became part of a wider plan to foster insurrection, why time scales slipped, and the ultimate failure of the entire project.

Spying on Nasser : British signals intelligence in Middle East crises and conflicts, 1956-1967 / David Easter.

Intelligence and National Security : Vol 28 No 6, December 2013, pp.824-844 (99)

Considers the evidence that Britain could read or had access to the encrypted communications of Egypt and other Arab states during a period of high tension in the Middle East.

INTELLIGENCE SERVICESThe making of Bletchely Park and signals intelligence 1939-42 / Christopher Grey.

Intelligence and National Security : Vol 28 No 6, December 2013, pp.785-807 (99)

Describes how signals intelligence came into being at the UK Government code and Cypher School housed at Bletchely Park during the early years of the Second World War, and shows that the process was difficult and the subject of much internal disagreement.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONSNew Zealand between America and China/ John McKinnon

New Zealand International Review: Vol 38 No 6, November/December 2013, pp.8-12 (82)

In this article, the author – John McKinnon, executive director of the Asia: New Zealand Foundation, highlights the need to recognise the nature of Sino-American competition and understand New Zealand's ability to shape events within this framework.

Suspicious smiles: Sino-Russian relations

Jane's Intelligence Review: Vol 25, Issue 12, December 2013, pp.54-55 (123)

The global politics of water grabbing / Jennifer Franco, Lyla Mehta, and Gert Jan Veldwisch.

Third World Quarterly : Vol 34 No 9, 2013, pp.1651-1675 (101)

"Since about 2010 evidence has been growing that the rush to control water resources is an important cause, as well as effect, of the phenomenon now commonly known as land grabbing." (Authors' introduction). This article looks at differences (both local and international) in the control and management of land and water resources. Also discusses water rights, informal access and historical practices, and notes the mixed impact of transnational corporations who use water for agriculture, drinks, and industrial purposes. Calls for water to be formalised as a human right with priority given to "... the well being and livelihoods of the poor, marginalised and vulnerable with regard to access, use and control", and for better coordination of land and water rights advocacy.

Green dreams : myth and reality in China's agricultural investment in China / Deborah Brautigam and Haisen Zhang.

Third World Quarterly : Vol 34 No 9, 2013, pp.1676-1696 (101)

There is a perception that some countries have in recent years been acquiring large areas of agricultural land in Africa as a way to ensure their own food security. This perception has become accepted "fact" for policy makers and scholars, however this article demonstrates through fieldwork and case studies that for China the perception is wrong.

Living with pollution : juggling environmental and social risk in Vietnam's craft villages / Trung Dinh Dang, Sango Mahanty and Susan Mackay.

Critical Asian Studies : Vol 45 No 4, December 2013, pp.643-669 (95)

Craft villages have, since 1986, become an increasingly important part of Vietnam's economy. However this growth has been matched by serious increases in air soil and water pollution. This study of several craft villages in the Red River Delta area of northern Vietnam describes the risks of craft village manufacturing, the environmental and health impacts of pollution, the importance of economic and social relationships, and the limitations of regulations as the sole means of controlling pollution. Argues that craft village producers are well aware of the risks but lack the resources to take appropriate action. Calls for a holistic approach which would recognise the complex social, economic and cultural relationships involved.
