- At the water's edge : defending against the modern amphibious assault / Theodore L Gathchel.

Annapolis, Md. : Naval Institute Press ; Shrewsbury : Airlife [distributor], 1996.
xvi, 266p. : ill., maps ; 24cm.

Col. Theodore L. Gathchel, USMC (Ret.), examines amphibious operations from Gallipoli to the Falkland Islands to determine why the defenders were unable either to prevent the attackers from landing or to throw them back into the sea after they had fought their way ashore. He places the reader at the water's edge as such epic battles as Normandy, Iwo Jima, and Inchon are planned and fought. He then uses these cases to explain why the defenders, including many with distinguished combat records, could not successfully defend against enemy landings.

- Century of spies : intelligence in the twentieth century / Jeffrey T. Richelson

New York : Oxford Univ Press, 1997
534 p.

- Chemical warfare during the Vietnam War : riot control agents in combat / D. Hank Ellison.

New York : Routledge, 2011
202 p. ; 23 cm.

Chemical Warfare during the Vietnam War documents the use of antipersonnel chemical weapons throughout the Vietnam War, and explores their effectiveness under the wide variety of circumstances in which they were employed. The short, readable account follows the US program as it progressed from a focus on the humanitarian aspects of non-lethal weapons to their use as a means of augmenting and enhancing the lethality of traditional munitions. It also presents the efforts of the North Vietnamese to both counter US chemical operations and to develop a chemical capability of their own

- China goes global : the partial power / David L Shambaugh.

New York : Oxford University Press, 2013. xvi, 409 p. : ill. ; 25 cm.

- China rising : peace, power, and order in East Asia / David C. (Davis Chan-Oong) Kang.

New York ; Chichester : Columbia University Press, 2007.
xiii, 274 p. ; 24 cm.

"David C. Kang believes certain preferences and beliefs are responsible for maintaining stability in East Asia. Kang's research shows how East Asian states have grown closer to China, with little evidence that the region is rupturing. Rising powers present opportunities as well as threats, and the economic benefits and military threat China poses for its regional neighbors are both potentially huge; however, East Asian states see substantially more advantage than danger in China's rise, making the region more stable, not less. Furthermore, although East Asian states do not unequivocally welcome China in all areas, they are willing to defer judgment regarding what China wants and what its role in East Asia will become. They believe that a strong China stabilizes East Asia, while a weak China tempts other states to try to control the region."

Conflict after the Cold War assembles classic and contemporary readings that argue about the shape of international conflict in this post-Cold War and post-9/11 era.

- Confronting Sukarno : British, American, Australian and New Zealand diplomacy in the Malaysian - Indonesian confrontation, 1961-5 / John Subritzky.

Basingstoke : Macmillan ; New York : St. Martin's Press, 1999.
xix, 246 p. : maps ; 22 cm.

The purpose of this book is two-fold: firstly, to provide a contemporary account of Confrontation by making extensive use of recently de-classified government documents from a number of countries; secondly, to highlight the regional and international implications of the crisis from the perspective of four western powers: Britain, the United States, Australia and New Zealand. The approach is therefore multilateral rather than bilateral, in the sense that examining the involvement of only one country in the crisis is deliberately avoided.

- Contentious identities : ethnic, religious, and nationalist conflicts in today's world / Daniel Chirot.

New York: Routledge, 2011.
x, 67 p. ;

- Contest for supremacy : China, America, and the struggle for mastery in Asia / Aaron L. Friedberg.

New York : W W Norton, 2011.
xvi, 360 p. : 1 map ; 25 cm.

There may be no denying China's growing economic strength, but its impact on the global balance of power remains hotly contested. Political scientist Aaron L. Friedberg argues that our nation's leaders are failing to act expeditiously enough to counter China's growing strength. He explains how the United States and China define their goals and reveals the strategies each is now employing to achieve its ends. Friedberg demonstrates that the ultimate aim of Chinese policymakers is to "win without fighting," displacing the United States as the leading power in Asia while avoiding direct confrontation. The United States, on the other hand, sends misleading signals about our commitments and resolve, putting us at risk for a war that might otherwise have been avoided. A much-needed wake-up call to U.S. leaders and policymakers, this is a compelling interpretation of a rivalry that will go far to determine the shape of the 21st century.--From publisher description.

- Empire of secrets : British intelligence, the cold war and the twilight of empire / Calder Walton.

London : Harper Press, 2013.
xxxii, 411 p. : ill. ; 24 cm.

The gripping and largely untold story of the role of the intelligence services in Britain's retreat from empire. Against the background of the Cold War, and the looming spectre of Soviet-sponsored subversion in Britain's dwindling colonial possessions, the imperial intelligence service MI5 played a crucial but top secret role in passing power to newly independent national states across the globe. Sheds new light on everything from violent counter-insurgencies fought by British forces in the jungles of Malaya and Kenya, to urban warfare campaigns conducted in Palestine and the Arabian Peninsula. Draws on a wealth of previously classified documents, as well as hitherto overlooked personal papers, this is also the first book to draw on records from the Foreign Office's secret archive.

► Germany and the origins of the Second World War / Jonathan Wright.

Basingstoke : Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
xii, 223 p. : 22 cm.

Suggests that Hitler's motivation for starting the Second World War was primarily based on his view "of history as a ceaseless struggle between races for domination" (author's introduction). Thus foreign policy was about empire building in the form of expansionism which in turn served as the vehicle for racial integrity and Germany's rightful place as a great power in the center of Europe.

2nd ed.
Boulder, Col. USA : Rowman & Littlefield , 2012.
vii, 399 p. : ill.

This thoroughly updated edition offers a balanced introduction to contemporary security dilemmas in the world. Sean Kay assesses the impact of the global economic crisis on international security and considers how the range of thinking about power and peace has evolved in relation to major flashpoints including in the Middle East, Asia, and Eurasia. Kay focuses especially on the implications of the election of Barack Obama and the changing role of the United States in global security. He builds on the first edition's emphasis on the role of trade.

- Hitler's gulf war : the fight for Iraq 1941 / Barrie G. James Barnsley : Pen & Sword Aviation, 2009.

xii, 244 p. : 24 cm.

During the spring of 1941, on an isolated, indefensible airfield 55 miles from Baghdad a group of poorly armed and outnumbered RAF airman equipped with obsolete aircraft, together with a few soldiers, outfought the much larger and better equipped Iraqi forces who were aided by the Germans and Italians. The engagement would prove to be the first real defeat of the Germans in World War Two. After an heroic defence, the airfield was finally relieved by a hastily assembled column of trucks, taxis, buses and antiquated armoured cars carrying infantry and Bedouins. The column had fought its way across a 500 mile barren, unmapped desert enduring temperatures approaching fifty degrees C to reach the airfield. In a gigantic game of bluff less than fifteen hundred soldiers supported by the RAF in their obsolete aircraft against odds of twenty to one went on to take Baghdad. They foiled a coup, returned a King to his throne and destroyed Axis aspirations in the Middle East.

Basingstoke : Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.
xii, 228 pages : illustrations ; 23 cm.

"EU foreign policy has long been considered the exclusive domain of member states. This book challenges such conventional state-centered wisdom by analyzing the influence of the Brussels-based EU officials in the sensitive area of security and defense. It asks why the member states have delegated important functions to the EU in the first place, and continues to examine how EU civil servants affect the planning and conduct of civilian and military operations. Using multiple case studies and unique insights from over a hundred interviews, this book shows how everyday security policy is made in practice. "--
